WORKING WITH PSYCHOSEXUAL ISSUES IN THERAPY

Six Workshops on Sex – 2018/2019

This course is intended for psychotherapists, counsellors and psychologists who may work with couples and individuals who present in therapy with relationship difficulties. Psychosexual concerns are often central to the presenting issues in therapy, yet often go unexplored. The aims of the course are to enable therapists to develop a level of comfort to assess and identify such problems. The course material focuses on the integration of knowledge into practice thus enabling conversations on key areas of sexuality or sexual difficulties. The course will also focus on the therapeutic tools and essential skills required to effectively support clients to deal with such complex matters. There will be a strong emphasis on practical skills, experiential learning and debate.

This, our third series of popular workshops, will be held in Dublin from October 2018 to April 2019. Each day is designed to be standalone, however each workshop builds up into a comprehensive training.

The fee is €120 per workshop. There is a discount for four or more workshops if you pay in advance: €100 per workshop.

Continuing Professional Development:

CPD certificates will be provided at the end of each day. Please see the lovely feedback we've received about our course on our website!
